New Hampshire disappointment for Sen. Simon

By David Rocks
PRN Washington bureau

MANCHESTER, N.H. — "The returns are not what we had hoped for," Sen. Paul Simon said following primary results Tuesday.

With 95 percent of precincts reporting, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis led the balloting in the New Hampshire Democratic primary with 36 percent of the vote, while Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt follows with 20 percent and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois trailing with 17 percent.

But Simon vowed not to quit.

"The reality is there are three candidates who will emerge from this primary with approximately the same number of total delegates," Simon said. "And the name of the game, ultimately, is delegates, so we go on tomorrow to Minnesota."

Simon and Gephardt had been locked in a battle for second place, with the loser of that battle considered by some to be out of the running for the nomination.

The other four candidates, none of whom announced they would quit the race, finished as follows: Rev. Jesse Jackson, 9 percent; Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore, 7 percent; former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, 5 percent; and former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, 4 percent.

Gephardt said his second-place finish proves his message centered on trade policy is a viable national campaign strategy.

"The critics said that what I said in Iowa wouldn't work in New Hampshire, but we found out that New Hampshire thinks this is your fight too," Gephardt said, echoing his campaign slogan.

Simon's press secretary Terry Michael said the loss is not devastating to the campaign, but conceded that Simon must win somewhere before the Super Tuesday contests March 8 to continue.

Two toll machines on way to bridge

By Katy Hodgen
Staff affiliated

VENICE — A contract to add two automatic toll machines on the McKinley Bridge was approved by the City Council on Tuesday. The city will pay $7,847.50 annually to rent each machine for four lanes.

Adding two toll machines will allow six lanes of traffic to pay tolls at once. Tolls are currently taken at four lanes.

Opening two additional lanes will be necessary for better traffic control, because the Martin Luther King Bridge is being improved, City Attorney Casper Nighohessian said.

The contract with Automatic Toll Systems Inc. for the current toll machines was to expire March 10, 1990, but has been changed to March 15, 1992.

Nighohessian suggested extending the contract, which provides for use of the machines on a temporary basis.

Each toll machine costs $21.50 per day to operate. The two additional machines will cost the same.

"It's cheaper this way (automatic tolls) than having to hire two people to run them for you," 3rd Ward Alderman J. Ervin said.

The McKinley Bridge is owned and operated by Venice. In the month of January, a total of 394,639 vehicles used the bridge, averaging 12,730 a day.

Skubish: Patrolman's proposal indicts city

By Mike Myers

GRANITE CITY — A retiring policeman's request to live outside city limits during the final 90 days of his 30-year career resulted in a wide-ranging discussion at the City Council meeting Tuesday.

A resolution granting the request of Patrolman Ervin Leuenhoff passed 9-1, but not without reservations from several council members.

"This is indicative of a problem we have in that Granite City is a good place to work, but no one wants to live here," 1st Ward Alderman Casper Skubish said. "We are going to have to make Granite City more attractive, clean up the city. No one wants to live in a slum."

Varadian cites accomplishments as alderman

By Dave Gosnell
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Assistance in creating balanced budgets and rebuilding sewers are 5th Ward Alderman Jake Varadian's legacy to the city. He plans to resign March 1.

"We were thinking that we would like to live in a more rural place. My wife and I both like the rural atmosphere and setting," Varadian said.

He was unable to find a rural location near the city and decided to buy a house in a farm area near Maryville.

Varadian has lived in Granite City all his life and on the same Olive Street block most of the time. Leaving is hard, he said.

"That hurts," Varadian said. "I can't put it into words. It's hard moving away from all your friends."

Varadian was elected alderman in 1981 and re-elected in 1985.

"I sort of felt like ... I contributed something to the community," Varadian said.

As Budget Committee chairman, Varadian said he brought balanced budgets to the council both years. He said he made sewer repairs a budget priority.

Varadian predicted difficulty in balancing this year's budget. He said he would continue to work on budget projections until he resigns and offered to help after he leaves.

He said he regrets not being an alderman while the city grapples with the proposed downtown shopping center. He said he thinks it will be built, but it will be a struggle.

At his last council meeting on March 1, Varadian plans to recommend a replacement to Mayor or Don Deere.

"I've never asked for much as an alderman. I'm hoping he goes along with my recommendation," Varadian said.

He plans to suggest someone who would do "what's best for the whole city" and not just the 5th Ward. He said he has discussed several people with Deere, but declined to name them.

Varadian isn't ruling out politics after he leaves.

"Maybe sometime in the future I'll be involved with politics. But not now," Varadian said.

Varadian said there will always be "a place in my heart" for Granite City.

"Granite City has many decent people — very charitable people. The good people of Granite City are out there to help."

Area reporter, Bagby, 25, dies

Bill Bagby

GRANITE CITY — William "Buster" Leo Bagby, 25, a reporter with the Press-Record/Journal, died at 1:45 a.m. Wednesday at St. Anthony's Hospital, Alton.

Bagby, 108 Wood River Ave., East Alton, is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bagby.

Bagby, a diabetic, was hospitalized on Feb. 1 and his gall bladder was removed. He was released Feb. 10, but that evening his blood-sugar level rose, his father said.

Bagby was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital, where he went into a coma. He continued in that state until his death seven days later.

"Bill was the kind of person who wanted people to like him, and they did," said Jack C. Ventimiglia, Press-Record/Journal executive editor. "The many calls we've received during the last couple of days from community members, and their concern for Bill, indicate the personal impact he had while reporting in the Quad City area."

As a reporter, Bagby covered Granite City School District 9 and the Nameoka Township Board. He previously covered the Granite City Council and the Police Department.

For his reporting on the Hoffman murders in 1986, in 1987 Bagby took first place for "Best News Feature" in the Press Association of Greater St. Louis contest.

Prior to working for the Press-Record/Journal, Bagby was employed in 1985 as a freelance writer for the Alton Citizen Journal.

Bagby earned a bachelor of science degree in 1985 from Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, with a double GRANITE CITY — When, if ever, should the U.S. intervene militarily in other countries?

From the time of the Vietnam War to conflicts in Central America, this is a question that often deeply divides the nation.

There is no such polarization among the four Democratic candidates for the 21st Congressional District seat. All the candidates generally agree that there must be a direct security threat to U.S. interests in order for the U.S. to act militarily. But there are shades of difference.

All agree Congress should not vote for more aid to the Contras, an irregular army which seeks to overthrow the present Nicaraguan government; the Contras are backed by the Reagan administration, which says the Sandinistas are under Communist control.

Below are thoughts of the candidates on President Reagan's Central American policy, the most heated foreign policy issue between congressional Democrats and Reagan.

Candidate Pete Fields, Madison County auditor, said he feels deeply about Reagan's policy toward Nicaragua. As a veteran of the Vietnam War, Fields said, he understands how devastating war is. He said he strongly disapproves of U.S. military action either indirectly or directly against other countries, unless those countries directly attack the U.S. or U.S. interests overseas. He said Nicaragua is doing neither.

He calls the Contras "cut-throats" and "rapists" underserving of U.S. aid.

"I would be very cautious" about military intervention,

Fields said. "I question our involvement in those kinds of actions. I've come to value the voice of reason."

Fields denounced what he called Reagan's tendency to supply weapons in areas with conflict, such as Central America.

"I don't know that supplying these countries with weapons of war is what it's all about," Fields said. He said he wholeheartedly supports a Central American peace plan formulated by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias.

Candidate Jerry Costello, St. Clair County Board Chairman, said: "I question our involvement in those kinds of actions. I've come to value the voice of reason."

Fields said there will always be "a place in my heart" for Granite City.

"Granite City has many decent people — very charitable people. The good people of Granite City are out there to help."

Candidate asks campaign spending inquiry

By Jack C. Ventimiglia
Executive editor

GRANITE CITY — A brief debate between 21st Congressional District candidates Pete Fields and Mike Mansfield occurred in the Press-Record/Journal lobby Tuesday.

Coincidentally in the office at the same time, the candidates disagreed amicably about possible illegal spending involving Fields' 1986 campaign.

"That's a bunch of crap, Michael," Fields said. "What we did is reported accurately."

Mansfield said he was not accusing Fields of having been involved in the way $19,000 in campaign money was spent in East St. Louis in Fields' 1986 bid against U.S. Rep. Mel Price. Mansfield left a typed copy of his call for an investigation of the spending at the office and left.

In his release, Mansfield states: "It was revealed in a (Belleville) newspaper article Sunday that Fields campaign literature distributed in East St. Louis may have been paid for by bond money intended for development of the riverfront in that town. It is estimated that as much as $10,000 of the bond money was illegally spent."

'Reported accurately'

Mike Mansfield
Wants investigation

Fields said Tuesday that in 1986 he did not understand the political workings in East St. Louis, but believed Mayor Carl Officer was a sincere man whose credibility was intact. The money went to Officer's supporters.

"He had me fooled," Fields said. "We might have had misguided trust there. I regret that, but it's not happening again."

Fields has said the money was meant to be spent for campaign work and the $19,000 expenditure by his campaign was legal and reported to the Federal Elections Commission.

"If I was like some other candidates, I'd go down there with bags full of money under cover of night," he said.

Mansfield called on the FEC to examine the following:

"First, was Pete Fields literature printed with money from bonds intended for riverfront development? Does his failure to report the cost of this printing on his FEC disclosure violate federal regulations? And, finally, does the donation of $10,000 from one source violate (the $1,000) contribution limits?"

Karen Finucan, FEC spokeswoman, Washington, on Wednesday said, "We have no complaint."

Without a formal complaint, there will be no investigation, she said.

Fields said he doubts the FEC will investigate.

"This isn't going to go anywhere," Fields said.

Fields, 42, Glen Carbon, is Madison County auditor. Mansfield, 33, Belleville, is on leave as chief aide to Price in Washington.

Fields and Mansfield are competing in the Democratic Party primary March 15 against Steve Maragades, 50, Madison, an attorney, and St. Clair County Board Chairman Jerry Costello, 38, Belleville.

Central Banks to merge

Central Banc System Inc. Chairman Drew Karandjeff has announced that "recent changes in the Illinois Banking Act allow us to join together our four metropolitan banks under one charter."

"We have applied to the appropriate state and federal bank regulatory authorities for Central Bank of Granite City to acquire by purchase and assumption Central Bank of Glen Carbon and American Heritage Bank of Granite City and then merge with Central Bank of Fairview Heights."

"We hope to have this completed by March 31. The resulting Central Bank will have total assets of approximately $215 million. I will serve as chairman and Bart Solon as president."

Farmers & Merchants Bank of Carlinville will continue to operate as a separate charter.

Karandjeff said, "We are excited about this opportunity to operate in a more effective and efficient manner. Many administrative duplications will be eliminated and better controls will result. This will allow us to better serve our customers by giving them much greater access to our banking outlets."

"Upon consummation of the merger, Central Bank customers can go to any of our six facilities and eight Total Teller locations in the metropolitan area to conduct their business. We believe the mergers will best position us to meet the competitive challenges of the future."

Three seek auditor position

By Mike Myers
 Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Fred Bathon, H. Jack Frandsen and Michael R. Myler are seeking the Democratic Party nomination for Madison County auditor, an office currently held by Pete Fields. Fields seeks the nomination for U.S. representative in the March 15 primary.

Bathon, 33, Madison, formerly the chief deputy under Fields, said more than seven years in the office uniquely qualify him for the position.

"A new county auditor unfamiliar with the complex financial information systems and programs I helped develop could have extreme difficulty maintaining the timely flow of data and statistics," he said.

Bathon said the auditor's office is complex and requires professionally qualified and experienced leadership.

"My position as city treasurer of Madison, coupled with my background as an employee with the U.S. Treasury Department, have given me a uniquely qualified insight in government financial management," he said.

Although Bathon was fired from his position of deputy, he said this does not reflect on his qualifications.

"I believe the voters understand the circumstances surrounding my political firing," he said.

Frandsen, 50, Alhambra, plans "to make the Madison County Auditor's Office the best in the state at no increased cost to taxpayers."

A railroad employee, he is supervisor of Alhambra Township.

Frandsen plans to keep "the openness, accessibility and integrity that have been the hallmark of the office under John Kraynak and Pete Fields." At the same time, he sees room for increased modernization and computerization.

"After you have done a thing the same way for two years, look over the method very carefully," he said. "After five years, look at it again with suspicion. After 10 years, throw it away and start all over again."

Frandsen said 16 years as a County Board member give him special expertise in the workings of county government and provide an established working relationship with the board that is better than that of the other candidates.

Myler, 28, Collinsville, administrator of the Pleasant Rest Nursing Home, would bring no government experience to the job but sees that as a qualification rather than a liability.

"Essentially, the auditor's job is one of watchdog," he said.

"I believe my extensive experience in running two private businesses, both successful, has qualified me to be the Madison County auditor. My experience in the private sector enables me to be that watchdog," he said.

He said he doesn't plan personnel changes in the office, but sees a need for more control of expenditures, especially those for travel.

Myler said that unless Fields publicly explains his firing of Bathon, voters will be kept from having information essential for them to cast informed votes.

"Without an explanation, the uncertainty surrounding this firing makes it the issue of the race," he said.

All three candidates are married. Bathon has three children and Frandsen has two children.

Mayors back Costello for Congressional seat

GRANITE CITY — Calling him a candidate with an established record, three Quad City area mayors announced their endorsements of congressional candidate Jerry Costello on Friday.

Costello was on hand at Granite City Hall to hear himself get endorsements from Mayors Von Dee Cruse, Granite City; Tyrone Echols, Venice; and John Bellicoff, Madison.

"This may not be a popular decision, with Pete Fields being from Madison County ... (but) it wasn't a hard one for me to make," Cruse said.

Cruse said Costello has a better record than Fields.

"I don't know of any record that Pete Fields has" other than county auditor, Cruse said.

Maers, 70, Granite City, Florida authorities said Tuesday.

John Edward Boggs, 55, was arrested Monday in Vermillion, Ohio, on a charge of murder. Maers was killed at 2 a.m. Thursday in Zephyrhills, Fla.

In addition to being accused of killing Maers, Boggs is accused of seriously wounding Harold Rush, 69, Granite City, and Maers' daughter, Betsy Ritchie, 50, Springfield, Ill.

The killing is believed to have occurred because Boggs was after a man named Gerald Rush, but mistakenly went to the home of Harold Rush, who is unrelated.

"It was one in a million coincidence" involving the suspect's confusion over the name of Rush, Bob Loeffler, spokesman for Pasco County Sheriff's Office, told the Press-Record/Journal.

"Boggs allegedly told his daughter he was going to Florida to kill his ex-wife and Gerald Rush. The two had gone to Zephyrhills to live in a mobile home after Mr. and Mrs. Boggs had been divorced four weeks ago," Loeffler said.

The home Boggs had been seeking was six miles from the home he mistakenly entered, investigators said.

Harold Rush has told deputies the intruder never asked for an identity.

Christian school principal charged with sex abuse

GRANITE CITY — The former principal of Gateway Christian Academy at 2087 Benton St. is charged with six counts of aggravated criminal sexual abuse, resulting from alleged incidents with two 14-year-old female students.

Mark R. Warren, 28, 2311 Delmar Ave., was charged Feb. 11 by the Madison County State's Attorney's Office. Bond was set at $100,000 and Warren was released Tuesday after posting bail.

Granite City police began their investigation Feb. 8 following an anonymous phone call naming the school and alleged victims. After officers checked with the two students and the school, Warren was picked up at his home.

The academy, part of the Mount Zion General Baptist Church, dismissed Warren on Feb. 4 after learning of the alleged problems, Pastor Larry Hunt said Monday.

•Congress Candidates against Reagan foreign policy

Clair County Board chairman, said he changed his mind on the Contra aid issue. He said he originally thought Contra aid was necessary.

"I would have voted for Contra aid if I had been in Congress. There was a feeling that they (the Contras) were there to fight communism," Costello said.

But, since the Arias peace plan has come forth, Costello said, that plan should be given a chance to succeed. He thinks Contra aid might harm the plan's chances.

Costello said he would support military intervention only if there was a "direct threat" to U.S. interests.

Candidate Mike Mansfield said he fundamentally disagrees with Reagan's Contra policy. He said Reagan's foreign policy in Central America has undermined U.S. credibility in the area and the U.S. should do more to help the region's countries economically.

Mansfield takes a historical approach toward U.S. military power in the world.

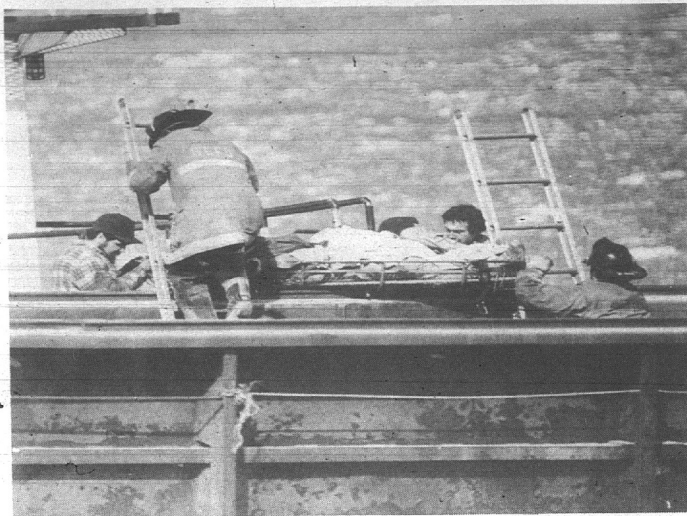

"We are the greatest country on the face of the earth. We are the protector of the free world and we have to maintain a strong defense. But just because you spend a lot of money on defense does not mean you have a strong defense," Mansfield said.

Candidate Steve Maragides, a Madison attorney, said he thinks the U.S., as exemplified by Reagan's Contra initiative, makes a mistake when it militarily supports leaders who are intensely disliked in their own countries.

"We should recognize the rights of all countries. The problem of the U.S. is that we have sought to impose on Third World countries their leaders," Maragides said.

He cited as an example U.S. support for the late Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza Debayle. Somoza's family ruled Nicaragua for over 40 years until being overthrown in a 1979 revolution.

The Sardinistas, who assumed power after the revolution, now have very poor relations with the U.S.

Man critically injured in fall

GRANITE CITY — A Granite City man was critically injured Wednesday when he fell into a almost empty barge at the Tri-City Regional Port Authority. The accident occurred at about 10:30 a.m.

Gary Herzing, 25, was listed in critical condition Thursday morning in the intensive care unit at St. Anthony's Medical Center, St. Louis County. He was taken there by helicopter after being treated at St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

A spokesman for the local medical center said Herzing had suffered an "open, depressed fractured skull."

Herzing was rolling back a cover on the barge when a section of cover he was standing on apparently moved, causing Herzing to lose his footing. He fell about 20 feet.

Granite City Fire Department emergency personnel responded to the scene in addition to Campbell Ambulance Service.

Rescue crews used a Stokes basket to lift Herzing out of the barge, then transferred him to a Bulk Service Corp. river tow.

The tow was used to move Herzing several hundred yards north to a dock area where he was transferred to a waiting Granite City ambulance.

Herzing fell several hundred yards north of the dry bulk transfer facility, where the accident occurred.

The facility is owned by the port district and operated by Bulk Service.

•Race Simon continues presidential quest

Simon will concentrate his efforts on South Dakota and Minnesota, which have primaries next Tuesday, Michael said.

"We feel that we're in good shape in both states," Michael said. But he added Simon will have a difficult time beating Dukakis there.

"He's really been pumping away hard in South Dakota and Minnesota," he said.

For his part, Gephardt will also concentrate on the two states, campaign spokeswoman Hollis Friedman said.

With Tuesday's third-place finish, however, the Simon may have some trouble raising the money necessary to carry on.

Simon is $500,000 in debt, but Michael said the campaign has enough cash on hand to pay for the North Dakota and Minnesota efforts.

Simon raised about $250,000 last week after his second-place finish in Iowa and expects to take in another $300,000 to $400,000 this week, Michael said.

In the end it may have been Simon's aggressive advertising campaign attacking Gephardt for changing his position on issues such as nuclear power, social security and weapons systems that hurt him.

Many voters interviewed said the ads did raise some questions about Gephardt, but that they raised as many about Simon.

"I wondered about Simon, saying something about somebody else," said a Manchester woman who voted for Gephardt.

"Talking about somebody else — what about yourself?" — won't vote for Simon because he's a mudslinger," said another.

"I liked what he had to say but I don't like someone who's going to sling mud."

Other voters had less studied reasons for choosing their candidate, however.

"I voted for Simon because that's my maiden name," said one Manchester woman. But then she added quickly, "And he seems like a decent guy."

Rape counselors' interviews spared

Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan has praised a decision by the Illinois Supreme Court upholding the confidentiality of a rape counselor's interview with a victim.

"We gave this case top priority in our appellate efforts," said Neil Hartigan, Attorney General.

Hartigan said, "Therefore, we gave this case top priority in our appellate efforts." Today, rape is recognized as a major crime against women. Counseling of rape victims is an indispensable part of the process of not only assisting the victim in the emotional impact of this crime, but of encouraging victims to assist the state in prosecuting the rapist.

The confidentiality of rape counseling reports was challenged in connection with the rape conviction of Leslie Foggy in Rock Island Court.

Foggy's attorney was denied access to reports of the Quad City Rape/Sexual Assault Counseling Program, prepared by Joni Dittmer, who counseled a 26-year-old woman who was kidnapped and raped.

The denial was based on a 1985 state law which granted immunity from testimony by a psychiatrist, social worker or volunteer who had undergone extensive rape counseling training and who was under direct supervision of a rape crisis organization.

Proponents of the law argued that "fear and stigma" had made many rape victims reluctant to seek help and as a result many crimes were not reported. In its opinion, the court majority said the role of the rape counselor was "not to investigate the occurrence" but to help the victim.

To open up the counselor's records, the court said, would "seriously undermine the valuable, beneficial services of those programs."

The court also held that the accused rapist's defense attorney had adequate opportunity to challenge the facts in the case from the victim and other witnesses.

Give empty home 'lived in' look

A house that is obviously empty for an extended period is an open invitation to burglars. Before leaving on vacation, take the time to protect your home from break-ins. The following tips are offered by the security experts at Schlage Lock.

Maintain a "lived in" look. Make sure your lawn is mowed regularly. An overgrown lawn is a sign of an empty house.

Discontinue mail and newspaper service.

Leave a car in the driveway.

Install a home security system. A good security system, properly installed and maintained, is the best day-long protection.

Install adequate outdoor lighting. Position floodlights at each corner of the house.

Purchase and use automatic timers. Hook them up to lamps, a television set and radio. Arrange the timers logically around the house.

Remove any spare keys hidden outdoors.

Lock all doors and windows—including pet doors.

Hook up an answering machine to your telephone that says you're unable to come to the phone. Do not say you're on vacation.

Before leaving, make one final check of the house. Think of yourself as a burglar and think, "How would I get into this house?"

For more information, write to Schlage Locks, P.O. Box 3224, San Francisco, Calif., 94119.

After watching a car without headlights turn into the Prather School parking lot, 2500 W. 25th St., at 1 a.m. Feb. 13, an officer alleged seeing the driver make several circular skids on the snow-packed lot.

Michael John Pinnon, 19, 2031 Illinois Ave., the driver, was found to have a warrant on file against him. The warrant alleged failure to pay on a charge of criminal sexual abuse.

A boy, 16, and a girl, 15, were in the car with Pinnon and initially gave police false ages; three full cans of beer and several partially full cans were on the car's floorboard, officers alleged.

Besides the warrant, Pinnon was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor, being a minor in possession of alcohol, reckless driving and driving without headlights.

Both juveniles were charged with curfew violation and being minors in possession of alcohol. They were released to their parents on notices to appear for a hearing.

State's attorney disputes chief's charges

Madison County State's Attorney Dick Allen disputed statements from Alton Police Chief Phillip Rarick and Dick Allen to prosecuting enough criminal cases and offers too many plea bargain agreements.

Allen said in a letter to the Alton City Council and at a press conference Feb. 11 that Sandidge's comments only undermine confidence in the criminal justice system.

"Chief Sandidge's remarks in the media recently are far from what the facts substantiate and are creating an impression in the public's mind that the criminal justice system is not working effectively," Allen said.

Sandidge has charged in recent weeks that Allen relies too heavily on plea bargain agreements, in which defendants plead guilty to a lesser charge than originally is filed.

"We never go to trial any more," Sandidge said. "Everything is plea bargained. We've only been to trial a handful of times over the past four years."

"He (Sandidge) seemed to lack exception to the practice of criminals pleading guilty to charges," Allen said.

Records at the Alton police department show that, since 1986, Alton officers have been summoned to testify at five felony trials. During that two-year period, the department filed

Dick Allen
Disputes charges

about 1,000 felony charges.

Allen said 3,000 felony charges have been filed by his staff, more than by any of his predecessors. Half of those are Alton cases.

Sandidge's comments are "a serious breach of professional ethics and a threat to effective law enforcement," Allen said.

Sandidge said he'd rather Allen respond to his comments "in the courtroom."

Sandidge said other area police chiefs have similar complaints about Allen.

"I tried to set up two meetings with other county police chiefs," (Chief Criminal Judge) Phillip Rarick and Dick Allen to discuss things," Sandidge said.

He said Allen failed to show up for the first meeting in Edwardsville. At the second meeting, Allen wanted to do was argue differences between the drugs crack and cocaine, he said.

"After the second meeting, the other chiefs told me not to call them again that Allen thought he was doing everything fine and we'd never convince him otherwise," Sandidge said.

Sandidge feels part of the problem may be a shortage of trial lawyers available to prosecute criminal cases.

Allen said 69 percent of felony charges filed in Illinois last year were resolved through plea bargaining.

Allen also criticized Sandidge's apparent reluctance to call in the special Mayor Case Squad to assist Alton investigations. Sandidge said Alton has a detective bureau able to conduct most investigations.

The Major Case Squad's primary purpose is to assist smaller departments without investigative resources and assist larger departments when they are overburdened, said Sandidge, a squad member.

Caseload threatens child abuse victims

In the wake of predictions by state officials that reports of child abuse and neglect will reach record levels this year, the union representing social workers employed by the state's Department of Children and Family Services has launched a protest campaign.

The goal is to pressure DCF to reduce "dangerously high caseloads."

"Our members are on the front lines of the fight against child abuse," said Steve Cullen, executive director of Council 31 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which represents DCFS employees.

"Given the current levels of initial investigations and follow-up cases, these social workers simply cannot do the kind of work they are legally and morally obligated to do to protect abused and neglected children," Cullen said.

Cullen said the union is encouraging social workers to "send a letter to the department asking which cases are to be their priority. They aren't refusing to do the work. They are just asking the department to tell them which of their assignments they are to handle first, since they can't possibly do them all."

"We've been put in a no-win situation," said child welfare specialist Barry Friedman, president of Local 2081, which represents DCF's employees in Cook County. "If social workers don't have the time to do adequate investigations, we have to make decisions without the necessary information."

"If we're wrong, a child is hurt or killed, or a family is pulled apart, and the social worker is blamed. But anyone who is interested in doing something more than laying blame, anyone who is interested in protecting children, has got to address the issue of caseloads."

Tracking down deadbeat dads pays off

EDWARDSVILLE — A state and county crackdown on "deadbeat dads" who don't make child support payments has boosted collections from $410,000 six years ago to more than $1.3 million last year in Madison County.

Computerized tracing of Social Security and driver license numbers by Illinois Department of Public Aid investigators has helped enforce child support orders, said Madison County Associate Circuit Judge Jonathan Isbell.

Before the state began providing free assistance in getting child support payments, many custodial parents "didn't have the resources to hire a private attorney and didn't know what to do. Now they have a place to turn," Isbell said.

But agency spokesman Dan Pittman admitted that the push to increase child support payment collections has sometimes strained the system and there have been delays in getting help to some individuals.

"In the past few years we've brought so many cases that the staff has been hard-pressed to keep up," he said.

The agency now has employees working at all times to try to keep up with the calls for help in getting child support, Pittman said.

In the last fiscal year, which ended June 30, Illinois collections were $97 million, up from $84 million the previous year and a goal of $125 million has been set this fiscal year, Pittman said.

In Madison County alone at the end of last month there were 5,563 child support enforcement complaints involving parents — usually fathers — who were at least two months behind in their payments, Pittman said.

The majority of them involve mothers who have custody of children and are on welfare.

"In Madison County, 4,193 cases — 75 percent of the complaints — involved Public Aid recipients and 1,396 did not."

In the case of mothers and children on welfare, the agency also will seek to get child support orders if a child is born out of wedlock and the father is identified.

If a father living apart from a family on welfare is unemployed, the agency also will try to put him into its job training and placement program, Pittman added.

The agency will provide help in getting child support payments to non-welfare recipients as well, because they may have to apply for public aid if the child support payments are not made, he said.

"There are definitely more people being found who were skipping payments," said Ann Ervin, of the child support section in the Madison County state's attorney's office.

Pittman said Public Aid investigators first try to get a parent delinquent in payments to voluntarily catch up. But if that fails, they ask the state's attorney to seek contempt citations in court.

"Most of the time when someone is facing having to go to jail they will pay up. But we have some that do go to jail," Ervin said.

Isbell, who handles most of the complaints that reach court, said, "If someone has the ability to pay and repeatedly doesn't, I will send him to jail."

Michael Vrabeck, supervisor of the child support enforcement division in the Madison County circuit clerk's office, said, "We are pretty well current on the cases that have been referred to us for enforcement."

Vrabeck said that if the divorce occurred in Madison County and the absent parent also lives in this area, his office will directly take applications for assistance in getting child support.

Like 12:15... "A man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things which he possesses."

How sad it is to see the world caught up in the race for material possessions. Sad but not unexpected. We have allowed ourselves to come to the place where a man is judged, not on what he is but what he owns.

This is not what life is all about. We may gain wealth but we will never be satisfied with wealth.

Good name is more to be desired than riches. A good name is earned not bought. Honesty, kindness, compassion, and loyalty, are just a few of the virtues that make life more abundant. And these are all the virtues of God. Since He created us in His image, surely these are the things He wants to see in us.

And it's up to us to see that we let them come forth. Why not start today?

Drivers not buckled up

Motorists in Madison County have an overall seat belt usage rate of 36 percent, according to a survey released by the Madison County Occupant Protection Program.

Twenty observation sites were selected, utilizing four road classifications: urban interstate, urban marked, local urban and local rural. Two hundred observations were made at each location.

Road classification totals indicate a 40 percent usage rate for interstate traffic, an 18 percent rate for urban marked (highway) traffic, a 16 percent rate for local urban (in town) traffic, and a 15 percent usage rate for local rural traffic.

These observations show a higher usage rate for "long distance" travelers and a lower rate for "short distance" travelers.

Lack of seat belt use is a major concern of the occupant protection program because four out of five vehicle accidents occur at speeds less than 40 miles per hour, and three out of four accidents occur less than 25 miles from home.

"People don't realize how important it is to buckle up even for short trips because they are misinformed and have preconceived ideas that they will only be in an accident on a long trip," said Lisa Wood, project coordinator.

New lotto not expected to hurt

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois Lottery Director Sharon Sharp said she expects little impact on Illinois ticket sales from the new Lotto America game starting in Missouri this month.

Sharp also noted that Illinois and three other big states, New York, Ohio and Michigan, hope to have their own multi-state lottery, with much larger jackpots expected than Lotto America, in operation by next year.

"Those states have a combined population of 48 million, compared to the 16 million total population of the six states in Lotto

America.

Sharp said in an interview that she believes Illinois residents would "remain loyal" to their own state's lottery and "the regulars who come across the bridges will continue to play here." She said many Missouri residents play the daily and instant games in Illinois as well as Lotto.

However, she said lottery players "follow the biggest jackpots" and if Lotto America jackpots become higher than those in Illinois, "possibly sales in Illinois would drop off then."

Illinois Lotto jackpots will likely often be higher than Lotto America and draw more Missouri residents across the river to play, Sharp said.

"I will be watching Lotto America closely, as all lottery directors will," Sharp added.

She said lottery directors in Illinois, New York, Ohio and Michigan are hoping for an early 1989 starting date for their multi-state Lotto games.

Sharp said some estimates that jackpots could reach $100 million in that game are probably too high, though high eight-figure potential prizes are likely.

The lottery directors and governors of the four states have reached agreement on forming the multi-state lottery but enabling legislation must still be passed in New York, Ohio and Michigan, Sharp said.

TRACEY'S TIPS

If your water heater is making rumbling or banging noises, it's trying to tell you something. These noises probably indicate a lime build-up in the water tank. As water is heated, lime settles to the bottom. If not drawn off periodically, this sediment accumulates and solidifies. This condition reduces the tank's water capacity and lengthens the heat-up cycle. Because these problems cause the system to function inefficiently, it costs more to heat water. So listen to your water heater. You may save some money.

Blood sought from remote locales

Securing blood donations from people in isolated locations in Missouri and Illinois is the goal of Missouri/Illinois Regional Red Cross Blood Services.

To achieve this goal, a new 30-foot blood collection bus will be activated, said Patrick McEvoy, chief of medical operations for the regional blood services.

"The bus could prove beneficial for some companies or groups who presently host blood drives as well," McEvoy said.

"We're still evaluating all the possibilities."

Initially, the bus will travel to small companies, department stores, churches, organizations and other groups that haven't sufficient space to conduct a blood drive or which have a small number of employees or members.

The bus can accommodate four donors at one time or 12 an hour, McEvoy said. It is fully equipped with specially designed donor beds, individual interview areas and a place to serve refreshments. In addition, there are working counters with proper blood refrigeration, a sink and overhead cabinets for storage.

A registered nurse and phlebotomist/driver will staff the bus. Blood drives for 15 to 60 donors, at one or several locations in one day, will be held.

'Convenient forum' rule again invoked

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Supreme Court on Feb. 11 threw out another lawsuit filed against a railroad in Madison County involving an out-of-state personal injury, saying it was "not a convenient forum."

In the latest of a series of decisions in recent years that have jeopardized the "plaintiffs' paradise" reputation for Madison County, the state high court ruled that a lawsuit first filed in 1982 against the Illinois Gulf Central Railroad over an accident in Shelby County, Tenn., should not be heard in Madison County.

The Illinois Supreme Court held that Madison County judges abused their discretion by granting several motions by the railroad to move the case out of Madison County.

Memphis, Tenn., resident Jay Wilford McClain was seriously injured on April 11, 1982, while driving a truck across ICG tracks in that city.

He filed a lawsuit in Madison County on Aug. 6, 1982, against the railroad. After Crystal filed a complaint seeking damages for loss of relations with his deceased wife, Crystal.

McClain's lawyers argued the case should be heard in Madison County because their client moved to Granite City after filing the lawsuit and was being treated by Dr. James Segrist of Alton.

The railroad argued the case should be heard in Tennessee because the accident occurred there, the railroad witnesses were in Tennessee, and all the physical evidence was there.

Although the Federal Employers' Liability Act under which lawsuits are filed against railroad establishments venue in any

Taxpayers billed on capital gains

SPRINGFIELD — Nearly $2 million in bills collected from taxpayers who made a common mistake on their Illinois income tax returns: they didn't report all income from capital gains.

"Before federal tax reform, capital gains were 60 percent exempt from federal income tax," said Illinois Department of Revenue Director Roger Sweet. "The money we are collecting now is from taxpayers who did not report all their capital gains to the state in 1984."

A computer is matching information from the Internal Revenue Service and the state to catch people who did not report capital gains.

In October 1987, the department sent out 7,099 bills, for about $2 million, including interest, to those who did not report income from the sale of certain capital assets, such as stocks, bonds and real estate.

"About 75 percent have responded and we've already collected more than $1.5 million," Sweet said.

Persons who do not respond to the bill could be subject to enforcement actions such as liens, wage garnishments or bank account seizure, he said.

Because the information flow has been accelerated, the department soon will be sending out bills to taxpayers who did not report capital gains on their 1985 and 1986 state returns, Sweet added.

In the McClain ruling Feb. 11, the high court declared circumstances in the case "pointed to Shelby County, as a more convenient forum."

The high court also again noted the "congested docket" of the Madison County circuit court as a reason for transferring cases from that county.

"The people of Shelby County, Tenn., have a much stronger interest in seeing that the McClains' action be tried in their community where the accident occurred and where the plaintiffs resided and worked at the time."

"Illinois courts have a corresponding interest in not being burdened with applying foreign law unless there are strong policy reasons and unless Illinois has strong connections," the unanimous decision written by Justice Ben Miller said.

Simon hails passage of civil rights restoration

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., has hailed Senate action to restore civil rights endangered by a 1984 Supreme Court ruling.

Simon, a central figure in the four-year struggle to pass the bill, said the Senate action is an overdue recognition that this "country does not want to go backwards on civil rights."

He said the Civil Rights Restoration Act, which passed 75-14 on Jan. 28, undoes much of the impact of the high court's ruling in Grove City College v. Bell. The ruling made it more difficult for the federal government to enforce anti-bias laws by withholding federal monies from institutions that discriminate against women. It threatened to undermine other civil rights laws concerning minorities, the elderly and the handicapped, he said.

Simon has been battling to offset the impact of the Grove City ruling from the outset. As chairman of the House higher education subcommittee, he was a floor manager of an earlier version of the bill; it passed 375-32 in 1984. He was an original co-sponsor of the Senate bill.

"For too long, we allowed this administration to use Grove City to justify discrimination. We must do everything we can to curb prejudice, and this action shows we are prepared to move in a positive direction," Simon said.

The case centered on the college's refusal to comply with Title IX regulations, arguing that it did not take any federal money even though students received federal money in loans and grants.

The Supreme Court ruled that only the college's admissions and financial aid practices violated Title IX requirements. The restoration act makes clear Congress' intent that entire colleges and other institutions which receive federal funds must comply with civil rights rules.

Although the original case involved only women's rights, the Reagan administration had expanded the precedent to include the handicapped and others, he said.

An amendment dealing with contagious diseases passed by a voice vote after much heated debate. The provision prevents dismissal of AIDS and infectious disease victims if they do not pose a significant risk to other workers.

Burn prevention pamphlets being offered by Ainaid

Pamphlets on burn prevention and fire safety are being offered by the Ainaid Shrine in whose potantate is Irvin State Jr.

John Craver, assistant administrator, said, "In the United States alone, every day, 32 people die and 5,400 are injured as a result of fires. Two million people, most of them children, suffer from burn injuries every year."

Studies show that about 75 percent of all burns could be prevented with proper education. The U.S., with the worst burn record of any industrialized nation in the world, endures a tremendous toll in loss of life, suffering, disability and financial loss.

"Statistics like these led Congress to proclaim National Burn Awareness Week. February also marks the 20th anniversary of the opening of the Cincinnati Shriners Burns Institute, which has provided specialized care at no cost to thousands of severely burned children since opening in February 1968."

"The Shriners Burns Institute was instrumental in having Burn Awareness Week declared, and is recognizing the week and its 20th anniversary by holding a special reunion of former patients from the Cincinnati area."

"In recognition of the urgent need to educate the public about burn prevention and fire safety, Ainaid Temple of East St. Louis is offering a series of seven pamphlets outlining ways individuals can 'burn-proof' their homes and learn to practice safety techniques to prevent burn injuries."

"Anyone interested in receiving the pamphlets, at no charge, can send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to: International Shrine Headquarters, P.O. Box 31366, Tampa, Fla. 33631-3366."

The pamphlets, written by Matt Maley, director of environmental control at the Cincinnati Shriners Burns Institute, cover kitchen safety, home fire escape plans, and microwave burn prevention.

Many communities around the country are adopting building moratoriums while local officials review zoning ordinances. They are concerned about development bringing heavy traffic and straining local government resources.

New windows feature "low-emissivity" — they prevent radiant heat from entering or escaping, thanks to an invisible metallic coating. Cost is about 20 percent over ordinary double-pane windows, but heating and cooling costs would be cut.

Give old favorites an up-to-date look: upholster period furniture with modern fabric.

Rule of thumb for insulation: the vapor barrier is always on the warm side, in the basement, put it on top of the batts against the heated floor above; in the attic, it goes under the batts and against the ceiling below.

Thoughts drifting to San Juan

Like the outgoing tide, our thoughts are drifting this week toward Labadee, San Juan, St. Thomas.

The "Sovereign of the Seas" has just begun its weekly task of carrying 2,000 sun-worshipping passengers on scenic cruises through balmy waters southeast of Florida.

It's still February, but day-dreams about the Caribbean are helping take local residents' minds off the snow and cold associated with the winter months here.

MANY METRO EAST families are veterans of such cruises and are looking forward to going aboard the world's biggest cruise vessel.

It is the largest in terms of cabins (1,141), construction cost ($15 million) and elegance (lots of marble and mirrors, glass and brass).

74,000 tons, it tops the 66,000-ton Norway. Joining the same league, the popular Carnival cruise line currently is building three 70,000-ton cruisers.

THE SOVEREIGN, owned by Royal Caribbean, has 14 decks, 18 elevators and 4.7 miles of corridors. There are numerous fountains and pools.

A "cascade clock" sends sheets of water over its eight faces, which display different times around the world.

Most of the restaurants, night clubs, boutiques, theaters and other public rooms connect with a five-story atrium, where glass-walled elevators ascend to circular observation areas.

Army days thirtysomething years ago.

Gov. and Mrs. James R. Thompson occupied places of honor while Mrs. James H. (JoAnn) Webb, wife of the Navy secretary, broke a bottle of champagne across the bow of the USS Abraham Lincoln, a brand-new Nimitz-class aircraft carrier.

The event took place one day after the (179th) birthday of this nation's 16th president, born in Kentucky but more closely associated with Illinois.

LIKE THE SOVEREIGN of the Seas, the Lincoln is about as long as three football fields placed end to end. The carrier will displace 80,000 tons and will carry a crew of 6,000, including its air wing.

This is the Navy's second vessel to be named after President Lincoln.

Christened in 1960 by his great-granddaughter, Mary Lincoln Beckwith, our nation's fifth ballistic missile submarine was decommissioned in 1981.

AROUND THE REGION:

IF IT IS patriotic to buy a new car, any of the Gray, its City area dealers, or to purchase a Taurus or Sable because Gray Citizens made some of the parts, Gov. Thompson also is trying to make it seem logical to Illinoisans to acquire an X2S sports coupe.

He played a role in getting Chrysler and Mitsubishi to build the Diamond-Star Motors plant in Bloomington-Normal.

Now, the X2S has been unveiled as the first of the two Diamond-Star sports cars to be produced in this state.

REDBIRDS, at least the baseball variety, are popular in Illinois as well as Missouri and bluebirds also have an excellent image, thanks to the uplifting song, "Bluebird of Happiness."

Bluebirds were devastated by pesticides prior to the ban on DDT but are now being re-established in Illinois.

Statewide, thousands of bluebird nest houses have been built through funding by the Nongame Wildlife Conservation Fund.

ILLINOISANS can contribute up to $10 of their yearly state income tax payment to the wildlife fund, by marking Line 11a of Illinois Income Tax Form IL-1040.

More than $120,000 will be available this year for research, management and education, plus restoration of habitat for endangered species.

Workshops on how to help bluebirds are set for such locations as the Boone County Conservation District office in Belvidere at 10 a.m. this Saturday and the Charter Bank in Chicago-Belvidere and Zone 153 in Rock Island.

THE TRI-CITY Regional Port is now one of five official Foreign Trade Zones in Illinois. The newest, Zone 1296, is at the Lawrence-Vincennes Municipal Airport.

In addition to Zone 31 here, the others are Zone 22 in Chicago-Manteno, Zone 114 in Peoria-Belvidere and Zone 153 in Rock Island.

Most area legislators see no Illinois income tax hike

SPRINGFIELD — Most area legislators believe there is little chance of the Illinois General Assembly approving a state income tax rate increase this spring.

Gov. James Thompson and many education interest groups are advocating a tax hike but senators and representatives say they still haven't heard much support from the general public.

Last spring, Thompson was unable to even get a legislative proposal. The State Board of Education and Board of Higher Education are urging an increase in the state income tax on individuals from the current 2.5 percent rate to 3 percent, raising the corporate rate from 4 percent to 4.8 percent.

"I don't think the climate has changed," said Rep. Jim McPike, D-Alton. "I have not seen any sentiment develop for a tax increase. There are some legislators willing to vote for a small increase but certainly not 60 (the number of votes) needed to pass it in the House."

McPike, the House majority leader, said he received only 10 letters after last year's session "criticizing the legislature for not passing a tax increase."

He said he expected higher education and school district officials would be lobbying legislators more actively for a tax hike this year. But "our's the average person encourages legislators to do it, it won't happen," he said.

"I don't think the climate has changed. I have not seen any sentiment develop for a tax increase," Rep. Jim McPike said.

McPike indicated he was not convinced the state's universities were in as dire straits as the officials contended and suggested that their budgets, particularly for administrative expenses, could be cut.

He said he would like to see more state money for elementary and high schools, but said that might be possible without raising tax rates.

If there was a small income tax hike it would require bipartisan support, McPike added.

Some House Republicans who indicated last year they might support a tax increase to benefit education now face March primary election opponents backed by the anti-tax United Republican Fund.

Sen. James Demuzio, D-Carlinville, assistant Senate majority leader, said it would be "difficult to get a tax increase this year as last year. I don't see any support for tax increases now in my district."

He said the case has not been made to him that he needed one. However, he said, "if school districts need more money. He is the Illinois Democratic Party chairman."

Demuzio said the legislature Memorial at Oak Ridge Cemetery in Springfield will be dedicated during ceremonies May 6, 7 and 8 that are expected to draw about 25,000 people.

Plans include a 48-hour vigil by an honor guard; the lighting of nearly 3,000 candles, representing Illinois servicemen who died in Vietnam or are still missing; flyovers by military aircraft; a parade; and the lighting of the memorial's eternal flame. Those who wish to participate in the vigil may call 452-4405 or (217) 529-8282. Veterans organizations, bands and other units wishing to take part in the parade May 7 are to call (312) 286-5073 or (312) 427-2668 or (217) 785-0073 or (217) 496-2427.

The memorial will be a circular stone monument comprised of five black granite walls with interior courtyards, representing each of five branches of the service.

At the center will be 15-foot-high gray granite walls, which will bear the eternal flame. The black walls will be inscribed with the names of the dead and missing; the interior gray walls will be inscribed with the names of former prisoners of war.

State issues warning on pyramid schemes Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan said the state will not tolerate would be inclined to look at cutting other areas of state spending before passing a tax hike in an election year.

"We're hearing from school people asking for tax hikes, but not the voters, and in an election year that would be critical."

Rep. Tom Ryder, D-Jerseyville, is "less optimistic than last year" about a tax hike. "Folks are going to say we went through a tough budget situation one year, so we can do it again."

Sen. Sam Vadala, D-Edwardsville, who has been supporting more funding for SIUE, said he believed higher education particularly had a need for more state money, but would not take a position on a tax increase.

The only area legislator who said he thought there might be a more favorable climate for a small income tax increase this year was Rep. Sam Wolf, D-Granite City.

Wolf said many legislators particularly "appreciate the need for additional funds for education."

He also said that if the governor advocates a small income tax hike and does not push for such tax increases as such as gasoline, the chances would be better. Last year, Thompson sought both income and gasoline tax hikes.

Wolf said he "could consider" an income tax increase but stopped short of saying he would vote for one.

illegal pyramid schemes. "The surest sign that a plan may be a pyramid scheme is the promise that you can make huge earnings not by selling anything but simply by inducing others to join the plan."

"This is the feature that makes pyramid schemes nothing more than the victimization of the many by the few," Hartigan said. "New people come into a plan and pay fees. Thousands of dollars may be in the scheme at any one time, but the money is always going to people who joined earlier."

Cases of child abuse expected to set record An estimated 95,000 children are expected to be reported to the state's child abuse hotline this year, topping the record of 91,764 reports, according to projections released by Gordon Johnson, director of the Department of Children and Family Services.

"Certain categories of abuse and neglect are growing at particularly distressing rates," said Johnson. "For instance, the number of infants reported exposed to drugs and alcohol skyrocketed 116 percent over the same period last year."

Crackdown urged on fraudulent schools

Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan has called for toughening rules regulating private business and vocational schools in the state. He said rules must assure adequate protection for consumers and reputable school operators.

"In one week alone, the office received more than 600 consumer calls relating to private business schools," Hartigan said. "For lack of adequate rules, disreputable schools trample on the ambitions and dreams of citizens, particularly minorities and disadvantaged... They saddle them with debt while giving them nothing in return."

Hartigan recommended that: be conducted as often as twice a year; annual financial statements and income tax reports be submitted to curtail financial problems sometimes resulting in substandard instruction and failure to give tuition refunds; change of ownership require approval of the state after a check for criminal backgrounds has been completed; and applicants be tested to determine if they would benefit from training.

VA lowers interest rate on home loans

The Veterans Administration lowered its maximum home loan interest rate from 10.5 percent to 8.5 percent effective Feb. 1.

In announcing the change, VA Administrator Thomas K. Turner said, "The decrease reflects the agency's response to current market conditions." The lower rate means that the monthly payment on a typical VA home loan of $70,000 will be nearly $52 less per month.

The last change in the VA interest rate occurred on Nov. 10, 1987, when it was decreased from 11 percent to 10.5 percent. VA home loans may be used to purchase, improve or refinance a house or condominium (including mobile homes).

FEET FIRST

A PARTICULAR IRRITATION
By Dr. Claude Hiles

Sesamoiditis is a general term that includes all irritations of the sesamoid bones. These small bones are encapsulated within the tendons that extend to the big toe. Any irritation involving them produces pain in the area of the big toe near its base. People commonly afflicted with this problem include athletes and dancers who constantly push off the big toe when they jump. Like any type of inflammation, sesamoiditis is best treated with rest. It may also be prevented from recurring with the addition of professionally applied padding. The worst thing is to continue performing on irritated sesamoid bones. This can lead to a non-healing condition that may well require surgery. Enlist the podiatrist's aid in combating this problem.

Podiatric medicine has had great success in treating bone deformities, fractures, sports injuries, and skin conditions. Contact a foot specialist for your family's foot concerns and for preventive care. My office performs in-office surgery. X-ray facilities are available. Family podiatry is practiced with professionalism and personalized attention. Preventive medicine is also emphasized. Hours by appointment at 1830 State St. Telephone 877-6295. John Hancock Medicare and most major insurances accepted.

Davis' schedule being kept full

Since being named interim chancellor of Belleville Area College in December, B.J. Davis has been finding his calendar full and he likes it that way.

He said administrative style depends on the people. "My real love is to work with people," he said. "I've got a lot of faith in them and I think people are basically good."

Davis is the former superintendent of Granite City School District 9, serving from 1966 to 1984. He has taken a break from his new career in real estate sales to fill the top administrative spot at the community college while the trustees search for a new chancellor.

The college district spans 2,100 square miles of southwestern Illinois and is the third largest institution of higher education in the St. Louis area.

Davis and his wife, Merna, a Granite City teacher, reside in a 62-year-old Edwardsville farmhouse that they restored. Davis said this is the seventh house he has restored.

Before accepting the community college job, Davis enjoyed spending free hours golfing, reading and fishing. Now he reviews videotapes of college board meetings and reads background on college issues when he has a free evening.

Davis said he offered his services to the college as interim chancellor because "I've had a lot of fun in education. Every day was a different experience."

"I don't intend for this to be a caretaker administration, whether it's for one day, one month or six months," Davis told the college faculty during 1988 spring semester orientation.

"The administration is here to see that the school is organized so teachers can teach and students can learn."

One major task given Davis by trustees is to review and make recommendations concerning the existing administrative structure. The review process is expected to take several months and will include comparisons of the BAC structure with other community colleges in the state.

A second responsibility is to ensure the college's finances are in balance.

State school, Medicaid shortfall still growing

CHICAGO — Asserting that current state revenues will not support any funding increases for education in fiscal year 1989, Gov. James R. Thompson on Feb. 2 said he will recommend a $2.7 billion budget for elementary and secondary education and $1.3 billion for higher education, the same funding levels allocated in the FY 88 budget.

"There is a significant need for more spending at all levels of the education system, but there is no guarantee that additional revenue will be available for any increase," said Thompson.

At a joint meeting of the Illinois State Board of Education and the Illinois Board of Higher Education, Thompson said, "I find each of your FY 89 budget recommendations for increased spending to be reasonable and responsible."

"However, without the revenue to back that spending plan, those increases are neither reasonable nor responsible nor possible."

Thompson will present his recommendations for spending in all areas of state government in a combined State of the State and budget message to be delivered on Feb. 25 in the Illinois House chambers.

The budget will not be predicated on approval of a tax increase, and it will reflect the consequences of no tax increase on state services, he said.

Thompson said the state anticipates some normal growth from current revenue sources but said the revenue growth will be allocated to fund as many programs as possible, while continuing a multi-year financial plan stabilizing the state's structural imbalance of spending more than it receives.

The Prompt Payment Act requires the state to pay interest penalties on Medicaid bills that are not paid within 60 days, and by the end of this fiscal year the state's billing cycle will take more than 70 days, he said.

The federal government would reimburse the state for half of the amount needed to pay the bills within the 60-day period, he added.

"In the final tabulation, the cost to the state for reducing the cycle would be less than the cost of continuing to pay our bills late with a hefty interest penalty, and interest penalty payments are not shared with the federal government," Thompson said.

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
 Attorney At Law

When a man and woman obtain a divorce, sometimes one party will be ordered to pay all of the bills which were incurred during the term of the marriage. After the divorce, a creditor may decide to pursue the other party who presumably was relieved of responsibility for the bills in the judgment of dissolution (divorce judgment). The question arises in these situations as to whether both parties can be pursued by the creditors.

Many people are surprised to learn that the terms of the judgment of dissolution are not binding on the creditors. If the parties were jointly obligated on the bill before the divorce, the creditor can still pursue either party in an effort to collect the outstanding balance. The terms of the divorce judgment are binding as between the husband and wife, but they do not prevent creditors from pursuing both of them after the divorce.

In one recent case, a husband and wife had a credit card in both names while they were married. They made numerous purchases, and the balance on the account was $2,500 at the time they decided to end the marriage. In the divorce judgment, the husband was ordered to pay this account, and apparently the wife assumed that she would never again hear from the creditor. Several months after the divorce, the creditor began contacting her for payment on the account since her former husband had lost his job.

The creditor had the right to attempt to collect the bill from the woman in this situation even though the divorce judgment ordered the former husband to pay the bill. In this case, the woman was eventually sued. She brought her former husband back to court on a petition for rule to show cause and asked the court to hold him in contempt of court for failure to pay the bill as ordered in the divorce judgment.

It is apparent from this example that a spouse cannot assume that he is "home free" with regard to a particular indebtedness simply because the divorce judgment orders the other spouse to pay the bill. The person may eventually hear from the creditor in the future if the former spouse reaches a point where he or she is unable to pay. The only remedy in this situation is to bring the non-paying former spouse back to court in an effort to collect the money owed.

Mansfield for U.S. House

Mike Mansfield deserves to be the Democratic Party's choice to represent the 21st Congressional District.

His views most closely resemble those of U.S. Rep. Mel Price, the man who has represented the 21st District since 1944. Mansfield's similarity to Price is a natural outcome of the fact that Mansfield has served on Price's staff for 10 years and as chief aide in Washington for three years.

Mansfield said he would want to sit on the House Armed Services Committee, as Price did. That makes sense for this district.

Our economy is dependent on military spending — Scott Air Force Base, 7,029 persons with 10,445 dependents, and 3,914 civilian employees; McDonnell Douglas, an roughly estimated 7,500 employees from the Metro East; St. Louis Area Support Center, Granite City, about 125 persons on duty, about 20 persons stationed with 160 dependents, and about 824 civilian employees.

During the debate, Mansfield said, "Defense, like it or not, is the biggest single employer in the 21st Congressional District." That's reality. Mansfield sees it.

Mansfield favors limited funding for Strategic Defense Initiative research. In our district, that could translate into funds spent, into jobs saved or created, at McDonnell Douglas. Cutbacks could mean the opposite.

Mansfield wants jobs for district residents. He chose the closed Swift Packing Co. site to announce his candidacy. He said his other opponent, St. Clair County Board Chairman Jerry Costello, wrote a letter that warned Swift against using outsiders to do refurbishing work and caused officials to change their minds about reopening the plant and employing 450 people.

There are no black marks against Mansfield.

What Mansfield has going for him is his belief that a strong defense can be maintained, but the defense budget reduced by bringing back some U.S. troops from overseas; he believes in bringing jobs to the area; he believes in funding for the East St. Louis riverfront development project; he believes in providing more money for health care; and he believes in safeguarding Social Security and Medicare.

With his 10 years of working for Price, we believe Mansfield can put his beliefs into action.

In short, Mansfield isn't the one spending time excusing himself because there is no need. He has an agenda that shows he will continue in the time-honored tradition of Mel Price. Together, the formula adds up to making Mansfield the 21st Congressional District's next congressman.

Mansfield is supported by Mel Price. He deserves your support, too.

Citizen speaks his mind

What would John Q. Citizen say if he spoke his mind on our nation's foreign trade imbalance?

We are indebted to the Illinois Manufacturers' Association for relaying this "comment on the times" it received from an executive of an IMA-member company.

"I drove my German car made of Swedish steel and interior of Argentine leather to a gasoline station, where I filled up with Arab oil shipped in a Liberian tanker and bought two French tires, composed of rubber from Sri Lanka.

"Once home, I dropped my Moroccan briefcase, hung up my Scottish tweed wool coat, removed my Italian shoes and Egyptian cotton shirt, and then donned a Hong Kong robe and matching slippers from Taiwan.

"More comfortable now, I poured a cup of hot Brazilian coffee into an English coffee mug, set a Mexican place mat on an Irish linen tablecloth atop a Danish table varnished with linseed oil from India. Then I filled my Austrian pipe with Turkish tobacco, lit it, and picked up a Japanese ballpoint pen, with which I wrote a letter to my congressman demanding to know why the United States has such an unfavorable balance of trade. I signed off with 'When the heck are you guys in Foggy Bottom going to do something about it?'

"I retired for the evening, knowing full well that I had done my civic deed for the day. Now, it's your turn."

An unfair, unlikely tragedy

If written as fiction, the events of the past week in Zephyrhills, Fla., would get a rejection slip. Nobody would believe such an incredible, tragic sequence of events. But it happened.

While local residents were on a winter vacation, their home in Florida was invaded in the middle of the night. In the darkness, a man began firing a shotgun and a pistol, thinking he had found the residence of his former wife and her friend.

There was no connection between the two mobile homes, separated by six miles along the Gulf Coast, other than the occupants' name similarity and their approximate time of arrival in Florida. Yet, an Ohio resident bent on revenge allegedly shot three persons without conversation or verification of their identity.

In addition to the serious wounds suffered by the two survivors, Mrs. Nigel Maeras, widow of the late Madison Mayor Stephen Maeras, suffered a fatal gunshot wound.

The injustice and the improbability of such an occurrence are almost beyond belief. The sorrow is great for many hundreds of people who knew and had high regard for the victim.

Fears retaliation for crime

To the editor:

Violence is opposed to the welfare of the public and this community. Yet a situation is being brought to play in our community which could lead to life-threatening violence.

In March 1979, a murder was committed in Madison. Not everyone has forgotten this event. Certainly not the victim's family nor the culprit's family.

Threats were made against the perpetrator of this crime by the victim's friends. They have been reaffirmed over the years and this is still a tense issue. Many, many righteous indignations might say, "Well, a murderer who is harmed or dies for his crimes is just."

However, the courts established his punishment — a period of incarceration in prison. His sentence is almost completed and he is being forced to return to Madison County.

He has paid for his crime by the court's decision. Now, to force him to return here where threats of violence are continuously made against him is atrocious.

Violent acts, even against a convicted murderer, are in opposition to the welfare of the public. What if innocent bystanders or neighbors would be harmed as the threats were carried out?

John McCullough made many positive accomplishments while in prison. He attended college and earned a degree, thereby learning a trade. He was involved in a program for drug abusers where he learned coping skills as an alternative to drug and alcohol abuse.

He studied many self-help books at his own initiative to further help himself. He has had a spiritual program continuously while in prison. He was a member of the Jaycees where he was on the board of directors and he led projects which were also beneficial for the future. He has written and worked for the prison newspaper. He developed his math skills and was able to be a teacher's aide in the college math program.

By his own initiative he found a release program outside of Madison County which would accept him upon his release. He was denied for the following reason: "... only knows you through the ministry of criminal justice. The parole agent states you're from Madison County and strongly recommends that you try for an address there."

He is trying one last, desperate attempt now to leave the state of Illinois; however, he does not meet the requirements to go out of state so he will almost assuredly be denied this also.

The problem with this denial is it will come only a week or days prior to his release, which will give him no alternative, but to return to Madison County. This is a tragedy because he has found programs which will accept him outside of Madison County if the parole officials would only allow him to go there.

Cruse explains support for Costello

To the editor:

In recent days many people have questioned my endorsement of Jerry Costello for Congress. These people have pointed out to me that I am passing up an opportunity to have a congressman from Madison County. I would like to answer these critics and explain my motives.

A seat in the United States House of Representatives is not important only to Granite City and Madison County. With a trillion dollar deficit, a huge trade imbalance, unrest in the Mid-East and Central America, it is important to our country and even the entire world.

Because of this it would be completely irresponsible for me to support a person for Congress simply because he lives in Madison County. We owe our state and our country to send the very best man available. I would be a pretty poor mayor if I based my endorsement on anything else.

For years I have watched Jerry Costello grow in stature and in leadership. I have watched as he has represented the needs and interests of his constituents in St. Clair County. And I have observed the way he has fought battles for all of us in Southwestern Illinois. And he has earned my admiration and respect.

He has sat in the hot seat of elected office and made decisions which which affected thousands of peoples lives. His opponents are untested.

True leadership means not doing what's popular but doing what is right.

Robertson loss not a surprise

This is the day that the voter

Surprise, surprise, for Pat Robertson — there was no surprise, as he'd suggested there might be before the New Hampshire primary.

If he was intimating he'd capture another upset "victory," as occurred in the Iowa caucuses where he finished second in front of George Bush, New Hampshire was a surprise only to Robertson.

Robertson wasn't able to do in New Hampshire what he did in Iowa, or in Virginia Beach. For that matter, where in October 1985 he gave his prayers credit for turning away Hurricane Gloria, stating, "When you pray to command a hurricane to go out into the Atlantic Ocean, it isn't like saying, 'Lord, bless you.'"

In New Hampshire, Robertson finished fifth with 9 percent of the vote and zero delegates. The figures must be discouraging to a man who has said anything he does short of becoming president would be a lateral move.

But don't think for a moment that Pat will hesitate to go all the way.

The son of former U.S. Sen. A. Willis Robertson, Virginia, candidate Robertson is expected to do well in the South. After Super Tuesday on March 8, he may be one of three Republicans still contending for the nomination.

From there, as the Republican Party's third choice, Robertson will take his money, delegates and candidacy to Atlanta and the Republican convention. There he can be expected to use his position to get his moral agenda meshed into the Republican Party's national agenda.

No one gives Robertson a chance to win the party's nomination. But don't underestimate his ability or will to "win."

When the convention occurs, he'll be 58.

Robertson has other presidential campaigns ahead and more chances to set his party's agenda and in short, to play a role in determining the kind of government our country will have.

As he said in a "Washington for Jesus" rally in 1980, "We have enough votes to run the country... And when people say, 'We've had enough,' we are going to take over."

Some information for this article was taken from the book, "Television and Religion."

TV host thanks Nestle plant for program aiding children

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — A benefit usually given financial backers of a television series is a chance to meet the star, and that opportunity was provided here Feb. 11.

Michael Pritchard, host of Nestle-sponsored "The Power of Choice" on the Public Broadcasting Service, stopped in Granite City to meet employees in the lunchroom at the Nestle Foods plant, 2101 Adams St.

Pritchard is currently touring the country, filming discussions with high school students for use in the series. Nestle has backed the program, designed to help teens and their parents with the challenges of growing up.

"I want you to know we really appreciate the help," Pritchard said. "You can feel good about being involved, and I want you to know we are going to do great things for the kids."

As a comedian, Pritchard once "opened for the Pope." He conducted an introductory program prior to appearances in the United States by Pope John Paul II.

At the same time, he worked as a juvenile probation officer. He brings a combination of both to his television series as he tries to take an accurate, but optimistic, look at the problems facing adolescents.

A native of the St. Louis area, he now resides in San Francisco. He credits his success with teens to "Midwestern values." During his presentation, Pritchard compared them to those he faced on the West Coast.

"I asked this girl about her values concerning sex and she said, 'Well, first of all the room has to be really dark.'"

He said that after talking to kids across the country he discovered that what they really want is a good example.

"My dad was one of those who came home growling. 'I want some peace and quiet around here.' Then he'd turn on 'Guns-moke!' I'd say, 'Dad, that's not peace and quiet' and he'd say, 'As long as it's my house, peace and quiet are what I say peace and quiet are.'"

After his presentation, Pritchard was approached by an employee seeking advice. Her daughter is going to start high school next year and both are frightened by the upcoming change in schools.

"When she comes home from school, you should spend a lot of time listening," he advised. "Kids have a lot to say. And ask questions, not about grades and things, but 'How are you feeling?' If you know how she feels, you'll find out what is really happening."

Pritchard said the "bottom line" in dealing with children is building self-esteem.

"A kid who values himself is one who decides his life is worth too much to get in the car with his buddies who have had too much to drink. Self-esteem is what gives kids guts enough to put their values ahead of peer pressure."

Ask Mr. Meltzer

By Bernard Meltzer

Home buyer can volunteer to pay agent's commission

Dear Mr. Meltzer: In the 40 years we've been married, I've bought and sold four homes, so I have learned a lot about the real estate business. I'm now about to buy a fifth house.

The seller has drawn up an agreement that requires me to pay the real estate agent's commission. Everybody I speak to says that they never have heard of any such a thing.

Two real estate brokers have told me it is even against the law because a broker is an agent for the seller, not the buyer. What goes here?

Answer: You are correct in that the real estate agent is usually the agent for the seller. However, it is not against any rule or regulation that the buyer voluntarily can agree to pay the commission. I admit it is unusual, but if you agree in writing to pay the commission, you are stuck.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: When the agent showed me the lot — a full acre for only $5,000 — I said, "I'm taking it. Sign me up." It sure was a bargain and I didn't want to lose out.

Now I understand why the owner sold it so cheap. It has no percolation. The chap who sold it to me tried on four occasions to get a building permit. Each time he was turned down.

The only advice the agent who sold it to me gives is, "Let's keep it quiet, and I can get you a buyer to take the property off your hands." Then he adds, "If you spread the word around that the lot has no percolation, you won't be able to get $500 for it." What do you advise?

Answer: My advice is to tell the seller and the agent that you want your money back and you will not be a party to a scheme to defraud someone else. Here is why you can get your money back: Land having no percolation is unusable until public sewers come through.

The seller and his agent were under obligation to notify you about this serious situation. They did not, and therefore you can call the deal off.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I closed on my home two days ago.

A letter arrived the next day telling me that I would be required to chop off 6 feet of my house. It appears that 6 feet of my house is on his land. But that mistake was made 60 years ago and no one has said a word about it until my neighbor got a surveyor.

What do I do?

Answer: Woodsman, spare the ax. I don't think any cutting away of your house is in order.

This encroachment has been taking place for 60 years in an open and notorious fashion. Therefore, in my opinion, either an easement or ownership has been acquired — by adverse use of the land contained in the encroachment. Get a good real estate attorney with the facts.

Consumer tips

By Neil F. Hartigan
Illinois attorney general

Q. I recently moved my trailer from a mobile home park to a lot which I am currently buying. It's been over a month and I still have not received my security deposit. What can I do?

A. According to Illinois law, you are entitled to your security deposit provided that you have paid all rent due in full for the term of your lease and that you have caused no actual damage to the premises.

If the park owner has kept your deposit for damages, then he or she must furnish you with an itemized list of damages incurred on the premises and an estimated cost for the repair of each. This list must be furnished to you within 15 days after the termination or expiration of your lease.

Failure on the part of the park owner to furnish you with this list within the specified 15 days or to return your deposit will consequently entitle you to a full refund of your deposit.

If you feel you have been treated unfairly by the park owner, contact your local Attorney General's Office for an evaluation of the problem.

Cancer patients called capable workers

With more than 100,000 people with cancer histories in the Illinois labor force, the Illinois Department of Human Rights (IDHR) and the Illinois Division of the American Cancer Society (ACS) have published a free pamphlet for employers, "What Employers Need to Know About Cancer."

The purposes of the publication are to educate employers about what they may expect from their employees and applicants with cancer, and to inform the employer community of its legal responsibilities to this group.

Roger L. Fuller, M.D., service and rehabilitation chairman, Illinois division of the ACS, says that as the survival rates of cancer patients increase, the number of people with cancer histories in the labor force also grows.

Director Joyce E. Tucker, IDHR, says cancer patients prove to be dependable, productive employees.

She cites a study by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., which looked at its own personnel records over 14 years.

The records showed employees with cancer had a turnover rate no higher than other employees and that no employee with cancer was fired for absenteeism or poor performance. Only 3 percent of the employees with cancer were on disability during the study period.

The pamphlet provides general information about the seven major cancer sites, including Illinois incidence statistics, and gives information on cancer and the employer's responsibilities to cancer patients.

The free booklet (1401L) is available from the American Cancer Society, phone 1-800-ACCS-2345, or the Department of Human Rights, phone 1-217-785-5119.

The publication will also be distributed in employer workshops sponsored by the society.

"Diet and Cancer" was the major lesson presented by Pat Mitchell and Helen Robertson at the regular meeting Feb. 2 of Trio Unit of the Madison County Homemakers Extension Association at Hope Lutheran Church.

The four National Research Council guidelines for reducing cancer risk are: reduce fat intake; eat fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereal products daily; eat very little salt-cured, salted and smoked foods like sausages, hot dogs and bacon; and drink alcoholic beverages in moderation.

The National Research Council committee reports, however, that "It is not not possible and many never be possible to specify a diet that protects all people against all forms of cancer."

FOLDING INSTRUCTIONS—Plane and Simple Rules:

- Entrant must make his/her airplane from the official entry form printed in the Suburban Journals. One entry form may be obtained free of charge at any suburban office or at County Ford. Only one plane may be constructed from each entry form.
- Cellophane tape and not more than three (3) number one standard paper clips may be used in construction of the planes. The inclusion or use of any other material will disqualify the entry.
- Airplanes may be made prior to the championship and brought to the Kiel Auditorium or may be constructed at the Kiel Auditorium. In both cases, any materials needed for construction, i.e. paper clips, cellophane tape, must be provided by the participant.
- Championship will begin at 10:00 a.m., Sunday, February 21, 1988 and end at 2:00 p.m. If more than one person qualifies for the Grand Prize, there will be a "fly-off" at 3:00 p.m. (See rule #12 for information concerning "fly-off" procedure).
- Each newspaper airplane must have the name, address, phone number and age of the entrant written on the plane. The championship is open to participants of all ages.
- Use of scissors in constructing or altering the plane will be allowed. However, the portion of the entry containing the "name and address" box must be on each plane and each entry must resemble an airplane i.e. have wings, a front "nose," missiles, rockets, crumpled balls of newspaper, for example are not airplanes and will be considered illegal (an example of one type of legal airplane is shown here).
- Airplanes may only be thrown from the designated balcony areas. Examples of off limit areas are the rafters, press box area, stage and auditorium floor.
- Airplanes may only be thrown by hand. Launching devices, equipment, etc. are not permitted. There is no limit to how many planes a person may throw within the designated throwing times.
- To qualify for a prize, a legal plane must land within one of the target areas placed on the Kiel Auditorium floor. Winners' names will be announced over the public address system. A person may win more than one prize, but there will be no prize substitutions. All names of participants who fly a legal plane into the sunroof will be announced. Also, their names will be posted.
- The officials, provided by the Missouri Ice Hockey Officials Assoc., will determine what a legal plane is and if a legal plane is in the target area. All decisions are final.
- A 1988 Ford GT Escort automobile with an open sunroof will be located on the auditorium floor. This new car will be the Grand Prize. It will be awarded to the entrant who flies an airplane through the sunroof of the car. If only one legal airplane lands in the car, the car will be awarded at 2:30 p.m. In case two (2) or more planes land in the car, there will be a "fly-off" which will begin at 3:00 p.m.
- If no plane has landed in the car by 2:00 p.m., a "fly-off" will be held at 3:00 p.m. with the people whose planes have landed on the car.
- All participants who have flown at least one legal newspaper airplane through the car's sunroof during the contest, all "fly-off" participants will receive one (1) "fly-off" packet at approximately 2:30 p.m. Each packet will contain three (3) newspaper airplane forms and nine (9) number one standard paper clips and scissors will be available for participants' use. Participants may choose to use an airplane they threw previously. If any "fly-off" participants are 12 years of age or younger, they may have a parent or legal guardian assist in making their new planes, but the youngster must throw the planes in the "fly-off." There will be no substitute throwers. At 3:00 p.m. all "fly-off" participants will assemble at the designated area and attempt to fly their three (3) planes through the sunroof of the car. One participant at a time will fly his/her three (3) planes). This will continue until all planes have been thrown. Participants must stay behind the line designated as the throwing line. Stepping over the line will disqualify that particular throw. If at the end of the round of flying, only one person has flown a plane through the sunroof of the car, that person will be the Grand Prize winner. If more than one person flies a plane through the sunroof in a round of flying, those persons will repeat the "fly-off" — each receiving one (1) "fly-off" packet regardless of how many planes a person may have flown in the car's sunroof during the "fly-off." This process will be repeated as many times as necessary to determine the winner. The winner will be the only person to fly a legal plane through the sunroof, or the only person to land a plane on the car in a given round.

14. If the winner of the automobile is a minor, the car will be awarded in the name of the parent or legal guardian. The winner is responsible for all taxes, license plates and title transfer fees.

15. Prizes other than the automobile will be awarded until the supply runs out. The number and description of all prizes will be posted in the Kiel Auditorium on the day of the championship.

16. Prizes will be awarded to winners at the prize distribution center at Kiel Auditorium. All prizes must be picked up in person by the winner prior to 2:30 p.m. on the day of the competition (Sunday, February 21, 1988). In order to verify winners, proper identification will be required. Children 12 years of age and under must be accompanied by a parent to claim their prizes.

17. Interpretation of these rules and all matters of contest administration rests solely with the contest judges whose decision in all matters shall be final and binding on all participants.

18. Employees of Suburban Journal Newspapers, KIX 104 FM, County Ford, Grandpa's and their immediate families are not eligible for prizes.

A meeting of the selection committee was held last week to elect the inductees, which will include two teams — the 1940 Granite City High School state basketball champions and the 1939 United States national DeMolay basketball champions.

An added attraction for this year's dinner will be the first annual scramble golf tournament to be held at the University Golf Course starting at 8 a.m. on March 6. Many St. Louis sports celebrities have been invited to play, and the proceeds will go toward paying for the proposed Hall of Fame building.

Groundbreaking ceremonies are planned for the spring.

Profiles of the 1988 class of inductees will appear in upcoming issues.

There probably aren't many people walking around the streets of Boston who haven't earned an Olympic gold medal yet still remain relatively anonymous. But one sports writer, Bill Baker, is not a name that sticks out in the minds of some hockey followers. But the dentist, who has been in the business for 20 years, was an integral part of a team of Americans that never forgot.

Baker helped lead the 1980 United States Olympic Hockey Team that competed at the Lake Placid, N.Y., games. It was no greater thrill for him than to win the gold medal.

"I guess the greatest it could be great was the fact that we were at it home," Baker said. "The home fans were going crazy and you could really feel their emotions."

This was the Olympic season when everything was going on. The Right now I'm not sure how far they can go," said Baker of Team USA. "I saw the first period of a game they played very well. They were very fast and they looked fast. I couldn't really predict anything right now. Maybe they do things they should be happy with that. Whenever we played we just hoped to get a good medal and we did that and then we got hot."

A gold medal means a great deal to Baker. He was the first American to win a medal at the world championships at the Olympics should be hailed as a tremendous accomplishment.

"I was a little tucked away," Baker said. "It means something to me personally. I worked very hard. When I was in the States I always give me special memories."

After such a glorious performance, Baker said he would need

Baker said. "They had a lot on their shoulders. They were young. They couldn't have done any better than we did. They were almost expected to lose."

Baker said in 1980 the American players were well aware of the Soviet dominance in international hockey.

"We certainly knew they were no slouches, especially after seeing them play in the 1976 world year before the Olympics," Baker said. "When we played them a couple of weeks before the Olympics, we were a little bit rusty. I can remember during the pregame warmups all the guys yuck-ing and gagging at each other while watching them. Their skating and stickhandling skills were incredible."

Baker, who now lives in St. Louis with his wife and two infant children, has seen a lot of Baker credits a lot of the 1980 Olympic success to the fact that they were a close group.

"I've never been closer to any group of guys in my life," Baker said. "It was just amazing how much time we spent together off the ice. I had a rooming partner like Mike Eruzione led the guys who were from the East Coast. I had the guys from the West. In the process, I found that kind of unity. Players were always going every which way, but we were all going for the gold medal on that Sunday afternoon at about four or five o'clock."

"It's funny, because it's four years later, getting it all back. It's just like I'm going back. It's funny, because it's four years I start getting calls and hearing about what a tremendous job you did. It's just the greatest accomplishment."

Stuart fulfilled dream at Columbia

By Ron Colyer.

An ancient philosopher once said, "In order for a dream to become a reality, one must first dream the dream."

It made sense to Jim Stuart, the veteran head coach at Columbia High School. Strickland started dreaming of winning a state baseball championship as a high school player at Granite City High School way back in the early '50s. But even though he played alongside shortstop Dal Maxvill, who would later claim fame with the St. Louis Cardinals, the dream was not to be then.

So Stuart turned to coaching, and continued to chase his elusive dream.

At times, as the years rolled by, the dream would become a nightmare, marred by errors, wild throws, and strikeouts by 16- and 17-year-old kids.

Three stops at small Missouri high schools...no state crown.

A four-year stint at Chester High School...one District title but no state crown. Stuart moved on, still searching.

On to Columbia, where he would take over an established baseball program from the retiring Vernon Smith in the spring of 1970.

In the first 17 years at Columbia, Stuart would see his teams win more than 260 games, win two conference championships, one district title and one regional championship. Twenty of his players would go on to play college baseball. Three signed and played professionally.

But the dream that he had dreamed so many times was still simply that, a dream...a figment in the far reaches of his mind.

He watched as Carlyle won the big prize. He waited as New Athens brought home THE Trophy and the headlines. He listened as Lee, Schulte and his Mayzeas Meteors talked about how they had won it all. But would his team ever be charmed?

Patience has always been one of Stuart's virtues, though. And in 1987, his patience paid off. The long wait finally ended.

His 36-year dream became a reality as the 1987 Columbia Eagles won the Illinois state baseball championship.

Stuart has since been named the Illinois High School Class A Baseball Coach of the year by two esteemed baseball groups, the Chicago Pitch and Hit Club and the Illinois Baseball Coaches Association.

Jim Stuart

Stuart was honored at a banquet in Chicago in January and by the Coaches Association at another luncheon in Chicago this month.

In addition, Stuart was named to coach in the Illinois High School Baseball Coaches All-Star Games in Peoria last July where his West squad won both games against the Eastern All-Stars. That honor was especially meaningful to Stuart because his assistant coach for those games was one of his former Eagle players, Bob Schlemmer, a 1972 Columbia graduate and now the head baseball coach at Melanora High School.

And how has his sudden fame affected the somewhat bashful Stuart?

"It's kind of nice," he said. "I'm not really awed by it, but it is gratifying after all these years. The awards really belong to the kids, though."

Stuart is particularly proud that so many of his former players turned out to watch his team at the state tournament. He points with pride to the fact that so many have gone on to play in the collegiate ranks.

He is not one to forget the efforts of his players, past or present.

"But you know," he said as an afterthought, "you've got to be lucky as well as good to win the state championship. We've had a lot of good players and a lot of good teams that just didn't get lucky."

Lucky or not, Stuart, at least for a year, sits atop the high school baseball world in the state of Illinois. He is the coach of the year. His team is the defending champion. The big prize is his until someone can take it away. Any thoughts of repeating?

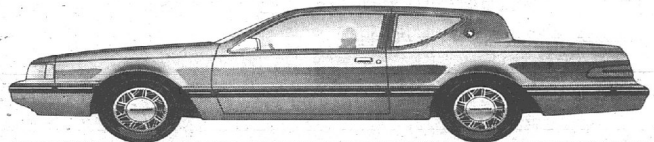

"Oh my goodness," he laughed. "It took me 20 some-odd years to get there the first time. I haven't even thought about going back yet."

As the old philosopher said, "...to become a reality, one must first dream."

How did Stuart feel personally when his team registered the final out in the championship game against undefeated Cobden?

"Like it was a dream come true," he said.

Manes on the breakaway, it did wonders for our attitude.

Nolan continued to make some fine saves and he smothered the

puck for a while every chance

he had. Henson said he will stick with Nolan in the quarterfinals.

Meanwhile, the quick-strike

ability of the Warrior offense came through in the first two periods as they built a 7-2 lead.

The Warriors aren't real deep in talent, but the good players they have taken them this far.

Matt Krekovich had three goals and two assists before assisting on Tommy Brown's series winner. Roberson had three assists. Brown had three goals. Rich Grogan had a goal and an assist. Todd Richey had a goal. And Matt Schnefke had two assists while playing in pain.

"We had a trainer here who said Matt shouldn't be out there in a regular-season game," Henson said of the sophomore with sore ribs. "But he wanted to go.

And when we won he was right

as for Turner, he put on a shooting shoe before a less-than-packed gym.

"We weren't really looking for the three-pointers," Harris said.

"But they were packed in on

Daryl a lot and the shot was there. That's Dale's range out there and he hit a couple from two feet behind the line."

"You begin to wonder how many three-pointers he will make before we started watching him a little closer," Ron Hampton said. "Turner is just a fine player."

It's been six straight wins for the Devils since their mid-January swoon (three losses in four games).

brating."

The Longhorns outshot the Warriors 11-3 in the third period and scored four times. Nolan allowed a soft goal to make it

7-3 and seemed to let it bother him a little. But as the Warriors tired and the Longhorns pressed,

Granite City barely hung on.

Schnefke even dived to block a shot by the dangerous Manes

with two minutes left.

"We forechecked well," Henson said. "You have to make the three goals go 200 feet to score and that means checking them in their end. We quit doing that against Fox last year."

Ah, Fox. The Warriors were bumped from the playoffs in sudden-death by Fox almost a year to the day earlier. That was a senior-laden team led by

Todd Hinterser that was one of the better teams in the league.

But this year's team, not as talented, has advanced farther.

"I probably showed more emotion tonight than other big wins we've had," Henson said.

"When I looked at this team back in October I never thought it would get this far. Parkway

West is better than we are. They have better skaters. But our team put up a big effort."

Things didn't look good even though Granite City won the regular game, 7-6. They were tired and Parkway West was coming on. But the Warriors got a 15-minute break while the ice was resurfaced.

"That hurt us last year

because we were running Fox off the ice," Henson said. "But we needed it this year."

They needed it because Henson stuck strictly with Roberson,

Krekovich, Grogan, Brown,

Richey, Culibek and Nolan.

Henson said he thought one or two of them never left the ice in the third period and the extra

10-minute game. Since Parkway

West won Saturday, the Longhorns needed only a tie to win

the series. But the Warriors' win forced the extra 10 minutes.

If the teams had been tied

after that, they would have gone to sudden death. But Nolan made more good saves in the mini-game and Brown, whose heart is almost as big as his body, got the winner on a rebound of Krekovich's shot.

"I told them to have fun and see what happens," Henson said.

What happens is that the Warriors face the winner of the DeSmet-Vianney series in the league

quarterfinals on Saturday and

Monday. The DeSmet-Vianney

series doesn't end until Friday,

so the Warriors will be better rested. If they win, they would be assured of a game at the St.

Louis Arena, since even semifinal losers get to play in the third-place game on March 2.

Vianney beat DeSmet in the first game 4-1. The site and times of the quarterfinal games are still undetermined.

The time to win will be underdogs against either team, but so what?

(the state tournament), I have been in it and I have coached in

it. I think Davis can compete with the wrestlers up there."

"I'll just go all out," Davis said of facing the stiff competition. "You have to wrestle like your last match."

Davis has been at the top of his game the entire season. He sports a 37-3 record and he defeated every wrestler he faced in Illinois. He split four matches with Cahokia's Shawn Brown.

Davis' matches with Brown, win or lose, have probably given
